I should be doing my first CO-OP work term this Summer 2021, but I have yet to be matched, what are my options?

If you’re an undergrad student, the following options could be available to you:

1. Not proceed with the Summer 2021 CO-OP work term and continue with 3 CO-OP work term by exception (or 4 CO-OP work terms, depending on your program.)
   - Please note, there is no academic penalty or any Summer 2021 CO-OP fees for a cancelled work term.
   - If you decide to study in the summer 2021, you will need to limit the number of courses you take to ensure you can continue to follow your entire CO-OP sequence on a full-time basis. Remember that you must end your program on a full-time study term.

2. Continue participating in the placement process.
   - The employment opportunities are limited, and many employers are adjusting to this new reality which is likely to hinder on Summer 2021 CO-OP opportunities, however the CO-OP office is working to continue matching students up until mid June.

If you’re a master-level student and you have not yet been matched with an employer for the Summer 2021 term, please notify your CO-OP Advisor so they can assess your situation. Please note, before making any formal decision, you must advise your CO-OP Advisor. They may have additional information to share with you according to your specific situation and program.
